LONDON, LAUREL GOUNTY.

The Republicans in Labor, but the Birth of the Candidate Not Yet.

LONDON, Sept. 15.-Balloting began this afternoon and on the 4th the vote was as follows: Colson 77, Adams 66, Wilson 37, Fluley 22.

-The republican convention for the 11th Congressional district was called together last Tuesday. The London cornet band let the henchmen know that they were expected in the large circuit court-room up stairs in the court-house and the music was appreciated by ail, some of the backwoods delegates never having heard anything of the kind before. R D. Hill, the chalrman of the district committee, called the meeting to order and then asked Rev. J. S. Jones, of Williamsburg, to offer up prayer for the convention and the brother seemed to have the hardest job he ever undertook. He kept away from partleanlsm as far as it was possible for a man to do under the circumstances; spoke about Columbus and the discovery of America; prayed that the present convention ply. have in their minds their future reward and that they might not be disappointed; that the president have wisdom in his hearf; the Senatora do the proper thing; that Congress be guided by right, and wound up with the charitable remark, "May the good Lord hless the Kentucky Legislature," the last part of which was received with smiles by the noblemen present.

Mr. Hill then made his little speech. proclaiming that he was a republican and that every republican in that convention was ready to make a better speech than that the democratic Hill made when he went all the way down South to make one; also that the repulllean party was born in Heaven and bad been blessed by the Lord in its every eflort since its creation. (P. S. Did the Lord bleas 'em when Cleveland was elected over Blaine?-J. P.) He then went on tomention the remarks a small boy made in the hamlet of Williamsburg ahout a peacock a neighbor had bought, which was received by the convention In better spirit than everything else he every voice hurrahed for Harrison.

The call of the convention stating the by the district secretary, Mr. Watkins.

nominations for temperary chairman was then in order. Mr. McCoy, of Bell son faction. C. W. Lester, of Whitley, presented the name of J. T. Freeman, unanimously acceded to.

He sold to that each contested county; be omitted have lost, among them Mr. Tom Walker, much instructed. Of course there are W. M. McAfee 60 sheep at $3.60 and to from the privilege of appointing any of the Lexington Leader, members of committees.

Judge Finley got up and explained that he wanted to introduce in resolution From Oear Kate's Scrap-Book, and Pubthat each county he allowed 'to appoint n man for each of the various candidates according to their strength luithe counties. W. A. Morrow moved for a vote on the previous question, which cut off all motions and amendments, and then the fun began. The question then to be voted on was the ltamsey resolution to exclude all contested counties on the committees on organization, credentials and resolutions, &c. War liorse and Tark Finley got up on his hind legs and demanded of Mr. Rainsey to know If he intended to cut the throats of the contested counties of Knox, Whitley and Metcalf, and taking his that in his hand, as did many of the Knox and Whitley delegates, asked him if he thought this convention could nominate a candidate and elect him without the nesistance of these counties. The threat was immediately understood by the whole convention and Ramsey arose to a point of explanation, but was ordered down by the chair.

The vote was then taken on the Ramsey resolution and it was nunnimously voted down, the "resoluter" failing to vote for it, and thus black eye No. 2 was given the Colson men. The Tinsley-Finley resolution was finally adopted, glving each candidate a right to appoint A Cure for Paralysts.

Frank Cornellus, of Purcell, Ind. Ter., says: "I induced Mr. Pinson, whose wife had paralysla in the face, to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. To their great surprise before the bottle had all been used abe was a great deal better. Her face had been drawn to one side; but the Pain Balm relieved all path and soreness and the mouth assumed its natural shape." It is also a certain cure for rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings and lameness. 50-cent bottles for alle by Dr. M.L. Bourne, Pruggist and Optician, Stanford, Ky had been using, and Mr. J. K. Watkins, of Whitley county, was made the district secretary unanimonaly. The committees not being ready to report, convention adjourned till 4 o'clock. At 3 o'clock the bell cailed the people to the court-house, where Willie A. Morrow republican elector, made a speech as a republican delegate-at-large for the space I would like to give you a synopthis length, will try to cut it short. He lock.

SEMI-WEEKLY INTERIOR JOURNAL A SONG FOR THE CHILDREN.

Oh, if I ovuld Sing the song I would, Do you know what that song would be? Twould be one to ring And joy to bring From the east to the western sea.

The children all Ita ciarion cali Should echo with hearts grown glad, And everywhere Its cheery wir Make sorrowing souls less sad,

It would hold the note Of the limit's throat And the meadow-lark's trill of glee, And the katyilld's dear Little chirp, and queer,

Quaint chime of the chick-a-dee. The cricket's chir And the velvet whir Of butterfiles' wings; and the hum Of Imay been

And the talk of the trees, When the wild winds wandering come. The sound of the sea In its rhythm would be

And the drip of the brier-bound rill, And the broken dream Of the old mill-stream, Fettered, but foun-free still.

The flutter of fleet. Pine fairy feet. That dance till the dawn appears; And the surge of corn In the summer morn, Rustling its golden spears.

The lisp of the wheat. And the whispers sweet When the clovers their secrets tell, The seamper from school

The tinkle of supper-bell. The rush of the rain At the window pane, When the earth is parched with drouth:

Of pearls in the pall, Sweet for the baby's mouth. The flare of the fire When the flame leaps higher, The crackling of nuts in its glow;

The clinking hall

The crinkling, aloof, Crisp ercep on the roof, When the frust steals up like a foe.

The slivery swing Of skates that ring, The laughter merry and gay: And the drowsy prayer, Ily manima's chair, At the close of a lovely day!

-Kate M. Cleury, in N. Y. Ledger.

HIS OTHER SELF.

The Vagrant Who Read His Own Inscription.

On a July evening at dusk two boys sat near the crest of a grass-grown embankment by the railroad at the western side of a l'enneylvania town. They talked in low tones of the sky's glow above where the sun had set beyond the low hills across the river; and also of the stars and of the moon, which was over the housetops behind them. There was noise of insects chirping in the grass and of steam escaping from locomotive boilers in the engine shed.

A rumble sounded from the north and in that direction a locomotive headlight came into view. It neared as the rumble grew louder and soon a freight rain appeared. This rolled past foot of the embankment.

From between two grain ears leaped a man end after him another. So rapidly was the train moving that they seemed to be hurled from it. Both alighted upon their feet. One, tall and lithe, led the way up the embankment, followed by the other, who was short and stocky.

"Bums," whilspered one of the boys at the top of the embankment.

The tramps stood still when they reached the top. Even in the half-light It could be seen that their clothes were ill-fitting, frayed and torn. They wore east-off huts; the tall man, whose face was clean-cut and made a pretense of being smooth shaven, had a pliable one; the other was capped by a dented derby.

"llere's yer town at lasti And it looks like a very jay place at that:" sald the short tramp to the tall one, easting his eyes toward the house roofs enstward. The boys, sitting twenty feet nwny, beenme silent and cautiously watched the newcomers. "Yep," replied the tall trump, in a deep but serlous and quiet volce; "and right about here's the spot where I jumped on a freight train tifteen years ago, the night 1 rnn nway from home. That seems like yesterday, though I've not been here since."

"Skipped a good home because the old lady brought you a new dadi You wouldn't enten me being run out by no stepfather! Biliy, you was rash!"

"Mebbe I was. But on the dend, Pete, it was mostly jealousy. I thought my mother couldn't eare for me muy more If she could take a second husband. My sister thought so, too, but she wasn't able to get away like mel Of course I was wrong. It was boyish pique drove me away. I didn't funcy having another man in my dead father's place, either. And I wanted to get around and see the world n blt. After I'd gone I often wished I hadn't. I'd never imagined how much I loved mother and sls. But I was tougher and prouder in some ways than most kids. You ean't understand that sort of thing, l'ete. And you can't guess how I feel bein' back here for the first time in fifteen years. Think of it, I was just fifteenwhen I came away. Why, I spent half my life here, Petle!"

"Oh, I've read somewhere about that -the way great men feel when they visit their native towns."

The short tramp took a clay pipe from his coat pocket and stuffed into it a elgar end fished from another pocket. Then he inquired:

"And now you're here, Billy, what are you go'n' to do?" "Only ask around what's become o' long." "There'll be a through coal train along in about an hour, 'eordin' to what the flagman told us at that last town. Will you be back in time to bounce that?' "Yes. We needu't stay here. There's little to be picked up in a place like cles of his face contracted. Then he "Then skin along and make yer investigations. I'll sit here and smoke till you come back. If you could pinch smooth gray hair and an expression of effects.-N. Y. Press.

a bit o' bread an' meat by the way, it wouldn't hurt.' "I'll try," answered the tall tramp 'l'm goin' to ask the klds youder, first, if any o' my people still live here."

The tall tramp strode over to the two boys. Ills companion shambled down the embankment to obtain, at the turn table near the locomotive shed across the rallroad, a red-hot cinder with which to light his pipe.

"Do you youngsters know people here by the name of Kershaw?" began the tall tramp standing beside the two boys.

Both remained sitting on the grass. One shook his hend. The other said: "No."

The tramp was allent for a moment. Then it occurred to him that his mother had taken his stepfather's name and his sister might be married. Therefore he asked:

"How about a family named Coates?" "None here," replied one of the boys. Hut the other said: "Coates? That's the name of Tommy Huckett's grandmother. Don't you know, Dick-old Mrs. Coates."

The trainp drew and expelled a quick, nudible brenth.

"Then," he said, "this Mrs. Contes must be the mother of Tommy's mother. Do you know what Tommy's mother's first name Is?"

"I heard Mom eall her Alice once." The tramp's eyes glistened. "And Mr. Coates?" he Inquired.

"Oh, I never heard of him. I guess he dled long ago." "And Tommy llackett's father, who'a he?" "He's the boss down at the freight station. Agent, I think they call him.' "Where does this Mrs. Coates live?"

"She lives with the Hacketts. Would you like to see the house? Me and Dick has to go past it on the way home. We'll show you.

"Yes, I would like to see the house." The boys arose, one of them rather sleepily. They led the way across the railway company's lot, then along a sparsely built-up street, and around a eorner into a more populous but quiet highway. At the corner was a grocery and dry-goods store; beyond that were neat and niry two-story houses, fronted by yards closed in by iron fences. One of these houses had a little plazza, on which sat two ehlidren. From the half open door and from two windows came light.

"That's llackett's house," sald one of the boys.

"Thanks, very much," replied the tramp, continuing to walk with them. The boys looked surprised at his not stopping at the house, but they said nothing.

At the next corner the tramp spoke np: "I think I'll go back now. Goodnight, youngstersi'

The boys trudged on, and the tramp retraced his steps. When he reached the liacketts' house he paused at the gate. The children, a boy of eight and a girl of six, looked at him curiously from the plazza.

"Are you Mr. Hackett's little boy and girl," he ashed. The girl stepped back to the hall door and stood there. The boy looked up at the tramp, and answered: "Yes, "ls your mother ln?"

"No, she's across the street at Mrs. Johnson's." "She'll be back soon," added the girl.

"Grandmother's in. though," continned the boy. "Would you like to see her?" "No, no! Don't call her. I just wanted to see your mother." "Do you know mamma?" inquired the girl.

"Well-no! I knew her brother, your unele." "We haven't any uncle-except Uncle George, and he's papa's brother," said the bor. "What! not an Uncle Will-Uncle Will Kershaw?"

"O-h! yes," assented the boy. "Did you know him before he died? That was a long time ago." The trninp made no other outward manifestation of his surprise than to be silent and motionless for a time. Presently he said in a trambling voice: "Yes, before he died. Do you remember when he died?" "Oh, no. That was when mamma was a girl. She and grandmother often taik about it, though. Uncle Will started west, you know, when he was fifteen years old. He was standing on a bridge out near l'ittsburgh one day and he saw a little girl fall into the river. He jumped in to save her, but he was drowned, 'enuse his head hit a stone and that stanned him. They dldn't know it was Unele Will or who It was, nt first, but mamma read about it in the papers and Grandpa Contes went out to see If It wasn't Uncle Will. Grandps 'dentified him and they brought him back here, but, what do you think, the doctor wouldn't allow them to open his coffin, and so grandma and mamma couldn't see him. lle's burled up in the graveyard, next Grandpa Kershaw, and there's a little monument there that tells all about how he died tryin' to save a little girl from drownin'. I can read lt, but Mamie can't. She's my little sister there."

The tramp had seated himself on the plazza step. He was looking vacantly before hlu. He remained so until the boy, frightened at his slience, moved further from him toward, the door. Then the tramp arose suddenly.

"Well," he sald, husklly, "I won't wait to see your mamma. You needn't tell her about me bein' here. But, say -could I just get a look at-at your grandma, without her knowing anything about it?"

The boy took his sister's hand and withdrew into the doorway. Then he my folks, then go away. It won't take said: "Why, of course. You can see her through the window."

The tramp stood against the edge of the plazza upon his toes, and eraned his neck to see through one of the lighted windows. So he remained for several seconds. Once during that time he closed his eyes, and the mnsopened his eyes again. They were

He could see a gentle old lady, with calm and not unhappy melancholy. She was sitting in a rocking chair, her hands restling on the arms, her look fixed unconsciously on the paper on the wall. She was thinking, and evidently her thoughts, though sad, perhaps, were not keenly painful.

The tramp read that much upon her face. Presently, without a word, ho turned about and hurried away, closing the gate after him.

When the two children told about their visitor later, their mother said: "You mustn't talk to strange men, Tommy. You and Mamie should have eome right in to grandma." Their father sald: "He was probably looking for a chance to steal something. I'll let the dog out in the yard to-night.

And their grandmother: "I suppose children talk, und, perhaps, poor fellow, he has no little ones of his own." The trainp knew the way to the cometery. But first he found the house where he had lived as a boy It looked painfully rickety and surprisingly small. So he hastened from before it, and went up by a back street across the town creek and up a hill, where at last he stood before the cemetery gate. It was locked; so he elimbed over the wall. He went still further up the hill, past tombstones that looked very white and trees that looked very green in the moonlight. At the top of the hill he found his father's grave. Beside it was another mound and at the head of this a plain little pillar. The moon was high now and the trump was used to seeing in the night. Word by word he could slowly read upon the marbie this inscription: "William Albert, beloved son of the late Thomas Kershaw and his wife Rachel; born in Brickville, August 2, 1862; drowned in the Allegheny river near Pittsburgh, July 27, 1877, while heroleally endeavoring to save the life of a

The tramp laughed and then attered "I wonder," he said, aloud, "what poor bloke it is that's doin' fluty for me under the ground here!" And at the thought that he owed an excellent posthumous reputation to the unknown who had happened to resemble him fifteen years before, he laughed londer. Having no one near to share his mirth he looked up at the amlable moon and nodded knowlugiy thereat, as if to say:

"This is a fine joke we're enjoying between us, Isn't It?"

And by and by he remembered that he was being waited for, and he strode from the grave and from the eemetery.

By the railroad the short trnmp, having smoked all the refuse tobacco in hls possession, was growing impatient. Already the expected coal train had heralded its advent by whistle and puff and roar when his associate joined him.

"Found out all you wanted to know?" queried the stout little vagabond, starting down the embanisment to mount the train.

"Yep," answered the tall vagrant, contentedly. The small man grasped the Iron rod attached to the side of one of the movng coal cars and swung his foot into the iron stirrup beneath. His companion mounted the next car in the "Are you all right, Kersh?" shouted back the short tramp, standing safe above the "bumpers." "All right," replied the tall tramp, ellmbing upon the end of a ear. "But don't ever call mo Kersh any more. After this I'm always Hill the Bum. in every community, be it large or small, you will find one or more political wiseaeres. Presidential year the political wiseacre is right in his glory, and for the next six months he will fairly revel in street corner prophecies and dry goods-box prognostientlons. I am at a loss to know how the political wlseacre lives, for he disdains toil as something altogether too vulgar for a mnn of his massive brain power to dally with. I suspect, however, that he is kept in food and raiment by a drudging wife who either takes in washing or keeps boarders to the end that her lord and master may lift up his voice in the busy haunts of men and declare, as one having authority, "what's what, and who's who," in a political sense. Before the national conventions meet the poMleal wiseaere has it all figured out who will be nominated at each, and although he generally guesses the wrong men, he is not the least abashed, but devotes himself for the remainder of the season to predicting who will be elected at the polls. At least every three or four weeks during the eampalgn he conducts himself in an exceedingly mysterious manuer, and takes his acquaintances aside, one atja time, and whispers a lot of Incoherent nonsense about So and So withdrawlng. He delights in having people believe that he is on the inside and knows all of the moves that are going to be made on the political chessboard, but he deceives no one and only succeeds ln making a very ridiculous exhibition of himself,-Detroit Free

Cross a Swolle Stream.

There may be reners who run a chance of having to rich across a swollen stream must it may it to swim. The safety of both rider me horse may depend on the action of the rider In such an emergency. Pictures are often seen representing horsemen sitting bolt upright in their saddles withile swimming their horses across a stream, tho whole line of the horses' backs being visible above the water. The artists who make these pictures can hartly have ridden a horse while the animal was swimming horse while the animal was swimming or seen the thing done.

An Earnest Worker.
Illungry Higgins—Where you been for the las' tree days?
Weary Watkins—Been workln' fer de the water and to lift his shoulders as the water and to lift his should have a should not be ridden and the water in of the water and to lift; his shoulders as high as possible. In doing this his hind quarters sink and he finds himself standing almost on his tail or in a position three-quarters erect. hi such a position, if the driver draws upon his reins, or throws his body back in the least, the animal's hind quarters will sink more and more, his body will take a vertical position, and benting the water uselessly with his fore feet he will sink.

As soon as his horse gets off his feet in the water let the rider grasp a handful of the unimal's mane, leaning at the same time well forward npon his shoulder, but without touching the horse's bend. The rider's knees should be pressed tightly to the horse's sides, otherwise he is likely to be swept off by the water. This is the only position that will enable a man to remain in the saddle and the horse to swim at the same time. The reins must be held bosely, and each well to one side. If the horse is to be guided in the water give the loose rein a little jerk in the direction desired. But it is in the highest degree important never to pull on the rein .-- Nur'west Farmer.

Tylug Up Wool.

No part of preparing wool for market adds more to its presentability than proper tying. In the first place nothing bnt pure wool should be brought onto the tying board. All wet or soiled locks should be clipped off, and any straw, chaff or other foreign substances picked off or shook out as much as pos-

Two strings each way is ample and as little as will keep the fleece together in best shape, less rather than more should be used, as a stringy lot of wool justly makes a bad hupression upon the sorter. Each fleeco should be tied up separately and compactly, but not close enough to give it a suspiciously soggy, heavy feeling.

with the idea that the fleece contains too much oil or slirt, making it liable to heavy shrinkage-the bugbear of all wool huying. There are various kinds of presses and other mechanical devices for doing up wool, but the simple flat folding board, which with eight common hinges my farmer cau make, is uearly ulways preferred by the busy shepherd. Horses' Names. The naming of herses that are intended as candidates for popular support on the turf is sometimes of importance, because an attractive name is apt to influence to some degree the large class of bettors, especially of the feminine gender, who make their modest investments with no other guide than chance. And certainly in the selection of appropriate and enphonious names the good taste of an owner is clearly shown. An instance of a singularly happy name must be credited to Mark Twain. who called his horse Baalbec, "because he is such a magnificent ruin," adding the further remarkable statement. "He is a mare." It is not given to all owners to find such felicitous names as this, but the list of prominent racers of the day reveals much ingennity and affords an interesting field for research.

Boston, the great long distance runner and the sire of the famous Lexington, was not named in honor of the "hub of the universe," but after the fascinating game of cards called "Boaston" in Hoyle, but more generally known as Boston, and the horse received the name because he was purchased with the profits of a lucky bont at the game .-- New York Herald.

OKLAHOMA'S BIG INJUN.

The Territory Represented by a Full-

Blooded Shawnee Warrior. Outside of the men of national prom inence, the man who attracted the most attention at the republican convention was a member of the Oklahoma delegation-a man to fame and politics heretofore unknown. When the Okiahoma republicans met ln 'territorial convention, says the Chicago Herald, they departed widely from all precedent, and fitly chose a full-blooded American Indian as one of their representatives at the national convention. The man chosen was White Turkey, chief of the absentee Shawnees. He is a fullblooded Indian and a direct descendant of the great Tecumseh. His father was for many years the leader of this tribe, and under his guldance, in 1830, they left their early home in Missouri and went to the Sablne country, where they had been promised a large grant of land by the Mexican government. At the breaking out of the Mexlean war the tribe migrated to the Indian territory, and it was while on this pilgrimage that White Turkey was born and received his name from a fowl of that description soon after brought in by a hunter. At the breaking out of the civil war the Shawnees sided with the north, and were so persecuted by their southern neighbors that the entire tribe emigrated to Kansas and remained until the war was over. Here White Turkey and eighty other members of the tribe enlisted in the Fourteeath Kansas eavalry. lle served two years faithfully, and was several times wounded. At the close of the war he was mustered out and, returning to his tribe in the territory, married a Shawaee glrl. In 1885 he succeeded his father as chlef, and has since been influential in laduelng his subjects to adopt the ways of civiliza-

NEES. tion and become citizens of the United States. Aithough he never received any education he is Intelligent and progressive.

and accepts the changed conditions of his people with good grace. He is still supreme ln authority in the tribe, though by common coasent they now take their most Important disputes into the white man's courts.

For several years White Turkey has been an active member of the G. A. R., and since the organization of Oklahoma he has taken a deep laterest ln polities, having been an uncompromislag republiean from the first. Most of his tribe are of the same polltleal creed, while their neighbors, the Pottawatomles, are mostly democrats.

The entrance of the full-blood Indiaa Into national pollties marks a new epoch la American filstory, and the outcome will be watched with interest.

MRS. BURDETT-COUTTS.

Peculiar Marriage of the Wealthy Widow to Ashmend Bartlett.

Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who has announced her intention of coming over here shortly for the purpose of taking an active part in the organization of the woman's department at the world's fair, is enormously wealthy. The basis of her fortune is the celebrated old Coutts bank, and she has done a vast amount of good with her money. Her marrlage to the young American, Ashmead Bartlett, some years since, was a unique social sensation. Aside from the marked disparity in age between the couple-the baroness had then passed her sixtleth year-a singular feature of the union was the fact that the usual custom of conferring the groom's surname on the bride was reversed, and Mr. Bartlett became Mr. Burdett-Coutts. On the wedding day the baroness settied upon her husband an annuity of $250,000 for the term of his natural life. Hut this liberal allowance is merely pocket money for his personal expenditures, as all the household expenses are defrayed out of the enormous income of the baroness. Although the husband is most devoted to his wife and their relations are apparently based on sincere mutual affection, the marriage has never found favor in London social eircles, and as a result the young husband has had the doors of all the best clubs closed against him. Mr. Burdett-Coutts take an active part in politics and is a pronounced conservative.

Russel's employe went to Mrs. Akin's premises and in the right hand stall of a stable thereon found a red calf of the veal size which he took to the slanghter-house and killed. It seems that Mrs. Akin has two stables on her place, one of which she rents to Mr. Tribble and the other to Mr. John Huguely and that Russel's man, when he went after the Tribble calf, got into the wrong stable and led Huguely's calf away to the shambles. Tribble and Russel heard of his dangerous mood and kept in the shade until by several special messengers they made him understand that no larceny had been intended, but that only an innocent mistake had been made. At this writing, Wednesday evening, about three-fourths of Mr. Huguely's anger has abated and it is probable there will be no loss of blood save by the calf.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King'a. New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Butters, and have never handled remedies that aeil as well or the have given such universal antistaction. We do not heaitate to guarrentee them every time and we atand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely in their merits. A. R. Penny, Druggist.

I have quits a number of FARMS for sale of the

I have quite a number of FARMS for sale of the very best il ue-Grass Lands in Lincoln county.

These Farms are all well improved and good rich lands, running in size from 50 to 500 Acres. Considering theis locality, their richness and fertility of soil, the convenience of tumpikes and railroads that bring markets right to our door, they are cheaper than the Lands of any other county, in the State. There is avarcely a Farm in the county over 5 miles from a depot.

The county is checked with turnpikes running inevery direction. There is not a public road entering the county neat that is not. Macadamized We have the Knogville Branch of the L. & N. H. R. dividing the county from Hast to West and the C. S. R. R. Irom North to south; the K. C. R. R. trom this place to Cincinnati, crossing the C. & O. at Winchester, giving full access to the markets of the whole world. Hesides, we have three large Flour Mills in the county that give us a market for all our grain right at home; and the development of the mountain regions of Eastern and South-eastern Keutucky by infronds and the outlet South by railroads and the outlet south.

ment of the mointain regions of Eastern and South-eastern Keutucky by initroids and the outlet South by reliroads has created such a demand for all kinds of cereals and provenider that wegan scarcely retain enough for home consumption.

The people are prosperous, generous and kind, belicting in Christianity and education. There is not a neighborhood in the county but has a good church and school-house.

Stanford, the county seat of Lincoln, is a prosperous little city of about 2,500 inhab, tants and is the great doorway from the North and Northeast, and atanding as it does gazing right into the bostom of the undeveloped mointains of Southeastern Keniucky backed up by the whole Blue-Grass region of the Stale with railroads rimning throughing to all points of the compass, makes it naturally one of the heat localed towns in the South for manifactures and other enterprises of magnitude. Water Works are now being agitated and right above the town about three-fourths of a mile there could be erected. Water Works with very little cost that would supply a city of 150,000 in-habitans with the purest and best water in the Mater Works are now being agreed above the town about three-fourths of a mile there could be erected Water Works with very little cost that would supply a city of 150,000 in-habitaus with the purest and best water in the world. Our little city has been newly rebuilt in Store it is too late, of tore it is too late, of the last few years and its business houses ard resildences will compare with larger cities of greater preferensions. Our merchants and tradesinest are all prosperous and doing well. We have two banks with a capital stock of $400,000 that are prosperous and in a good condition.

We have aplendid schools. We have a Femala College, a large brick building, with over 100 pupils in attendance and under tha principaliship of Prof. J. M. Hubbard, is in a flourishing conuction. We also have a Seminary that is a good school, with Prof. H. F. Johnson, at its head. We have one of the nest Public School buildings in this section of the State, with ovar 100 pupils in attendance, and with other good private schools, you see our school facilities are excellent.

We have elegant church buildings, representing every denomination, with a full corps of ministers of fina -class talent and ara doing a better business than any class of men in tha city.

I have tried to make this statement as facts, without any exaggeration or coloring, as those who knew will bear ne out, and those who wish to buy pleasant homes at lair prices and locate among a good peopla with all the best surroundings, would do well to call and see me before pur-
